DECORATING WITH RUGS

Follow the Harveys' lead and use rugs to anchor your scheme with texture, colour and pattern

Rugs add texture and colour to a room and also have the added benefit of being portable and easy to change. The Harveys chose the rug to anchor their scheme with texture, colour and pattern. They used a mix of rug types, from a patterned rug in the living room to a plain rug in the dining room.

Consider your options

There are a number of things to consider when choosing a rug. The size of the rug is important. It should be large enough to fit under the furniture. The colour and pattern of the rug should complement the other elements in the room. The texture of the rug is also important. A soft rug is good for a living room, while a more durable rug is better for a dining room. The Harveys chose a patterned rug for the living room and a plain rug for the dining room.

It should be considered whether you are prepared to invest in a new floor covering when the time comes to redecorate.

Style and substance

When considering style, it's important to think about the rug's texture, colour and pattern. A rug with a bold pattern and bright colours can make a statement in a room. A rug with a subtle pattern and neutral colours is more understated. The Harveys chose a patterned rug for the living room and a plain rug for the dining room. They also chose a rug with a bold pattern and bright colours for the living room and a rug with a subtle pattern and neutral colours for the dining room.

When it comes to substance, it's important to think about the rug's durability and ease of maintenance. A rug that is made of a durable material and is easy to clean is a good choice. The Harveys chose a rug made of a durable material and that is easy to clean.
