SEE IT

The family trip to the flicks is as much a part of Christmas as having to pull 'oh, it's great' gift faces. And here to keep everyone (genuinely) happy this year is animated film Ballerina, following orphan Félice (Elle Fanning) as she jetés her way over all obstacles to attend a grand Paris dance school. Sweet and uplifting, your sugar-plum fairies will love.
Out tomorrow

Santa: we've been really, really, REALLY good this year... Leather bag, £1,110, Saint Laurent (selfridges.com)

Rucking around the Christmas tree. Rucksack, £116, Liebeskind (amazon.co.uk)

WIN IT

If your Christmas wish would be a luxe interiors makeover, consider Rachel Bates your fairy godmother. Her online boutique, Elegantly Curated, lives up to its name, with gorgeous glassware, porcelain, furniture and rugs, plus collaborations with the likes of Laurent-Perrier (rachelbatesinteriors.com). Two Telegraph subscribers can each win £500 to spend.

DO IT

From karaokeing with strangers to sending out cards with his face on, Bill Murray is the king of Christmas quirkiness. And that's before we've even got to Ghostbusters or Scrooged... So it's only right that Brighton bar Patterns is paying tribute, throwing a free bash full of Murray movies, Murray masks, Murray mints, mulled wine and, of course, karaoke. Yes! 23 Dec; patternsbrighton.com

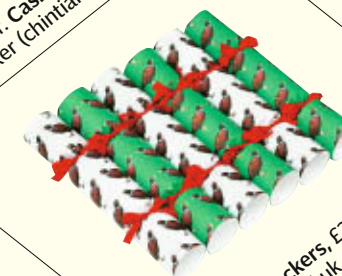

Now all we need is frankincense and myrrh. Boots, £370, Anine Bing (aninebing.com)

Stars of wonder. Cashmere jumper, £350, Chinti & Parker (chintiandparker.com)

It just wouldn't be Christmas without... Socks, £16 for set of three, Happy Socks (johnlewis.com)

Crack on. Crackers, £35, British Library Shop (bl.uk.com)

BOOK IT

If ever there was a film begging a West End adaptation, it's Jack Black classic School of Rock. And, sure enough, Andrew Lloyd Webber's stage version doesn't disappoint. With roof-raising songs, right-side-of-cute performances and guitar riffs aplenty, it's a ideal day out for the Christmas hols. Rock on.
